

Coach Dave Taylor

David Taylor has been a basketball coach for 20 years at both the high school and Division I collegiate level where he was an assistant coach at the United States Air Force Academy for 4 years.

David Taylor started his coaching career at Templeton High School where he took a 0-17 team to the final four of their division in his second year making the playoffs all 5 years. He then went to the USAF Academy where he led their Junior Varsity team to their only 20 win season. While there he performed recruiting duties, off-season conditioning programs and scouting assignments. Taylor then went to Canyon High School where he led his team to the Final 8 before losing to the eventual state champion powerhouse Mater Dei. That was the furthest that school has been in the playoffs in their 30+ years of existence. He has been at Lodi High School the last 2 years and has helped direct a Native American National Team.

Taylor has also been involved in National Exposure Camps for the past 15 years and works for adidas at their national All-American Camps in San Diego, CA and formerly Atlanta, GA; where he has worked as the National Camp Director. Taylor has made a living evaluating and mentoring players. He has many former players in the NBA and overseas. Taylor is still active with adidas where he consults and directs their top National evaluation camps.
